Radford G. Davis, DVM, MPH, DACVPM. Why read this book? Because we live in a world where, seen or unseen, animals impact our lives in countless ways, some for the betterment of our physical and mental health, and some that can cause us harm. In the United States, 37 percent of homes have dogs and 32 percent have cats, totaling over 150 million canine and feline pets. There are also millions of pet birds, "pocket pets," reptiles, and other exotic species kept within our residences.
